This is a new treatment process called Procellacore. The state had tested this out at a couple locations throughout the state and has had success. This is an expensive process that the conservation commission is hoping the state will reimburse 25%. Saturday February 16 at the Old Town Hall there will be an Exotic Weeds and Aquatic Species Seminar from 9:00-11:00 where we can find out more about this specific treatment. The part of the lake that has the most milfoil is located at Pinkham point / cove. J. Bailey asked what the deadline to sign the contract is. J. Mullen mentions that the contract is requested back by the end of January, early February. J. Bailey confirms that the contract needs to be signed before the townspeople approve the additional funds. J. Mullen states that the Board of Selectmen can wait to sign if needed. If the milfoil is not maintained it will eventually clog the water and no one will enjoy it. Board will review again at the next meeting.

- Jim Keegan speaks about the septic system for the property located behind his house. J. Keegan speaks that there is a machine digging behind his house for septic purposes. J. Keegan mentions the business that is being run on that property. J. Hotchkiss asked J. Mammone if there is any approved septic design for that location. J. Mammone has not received anything for that location to date. The state has to approve the septic design. Roxanne Keegan-Tufts believes that the state should have all landowners' approval to install a septic. J. Bailey mentions how the locations junk yard was cleaned up as requested by the Town. Business owners were then advised that they needed to start the process to create a legal business within the Town. Planning Board has not received anything to date for the business. J. Bailey suggests reaching out with legal on the business and writing a cease and desists. J. Keegan wants to know why there is digging on the property. Did the Board turn a blind eye on the business? J. Bailey assures that the board will look into this issue with legal. J. Mammone mentions that he has been advised to start sending letters to any Middleton businesses that have not registered with the Town. J. Mullen mentions that if the Town takes action on one local business, they need to take action on all in that same category. J. Mullen asked J. Mammone to have that list within 30 days.
